Chris Heyse Portrait Workshop

This well designed and informative program was tailored for those new to portraiture and those who have had previous experience.

The session began with the construction of the head using the Loomis method and discussion of the differences between measurements for children and adults.

Under Chris' expert guidance, participants painted a portrait of a young child, using clear, clean, bright colors that brought the young girl to life. All who participated were pleased with the results and the knowledge they gained during the session and could now approach portraits without fear.

Many thanks to Chris for sharing her wonderful insight and experience. It was deemed a resounding success by those who participated.

Workshops

DWS is pleased to announce a three- day watercolor Zoom workshop “Creative Backgrounds” with artist Robin Poteet, August 22, 23 and 25, 2022.

This workshop will focus creative backgrounds for any Subject. To quote Robin “We have all done it. We’ve painted a great subject and have avoided the background until the last minute. Now What? We end up painting a washy, safe, background that does little to enhance the subject. NO MORE! In this workshop students will learn how to combine realism and abstraction to take their work to the next level.” Join Robin and other artists and “jazz up your backgrounds.”

Day One – introduction, demonstration and group exercises.

Day Two – Demonstration followed by participants working on their own, with instruction, if needed.

Day Three – Demonstration followed by participants working on their own, with instruction. Sharing and wrap-up during the final hour.

The application will soon be available on our website and sent to our individual members. This workshop is limited to twenty participants. DWS members $195, non-members, $235. Daily recordings will be provided.

You may view Robin Poteet’s work on her website at robinpoteet.com.

Evaluating Your Work

On an artist's journey the ability to objectively evaluate your work is key to your growth as an artist and the creation of stronger, more memorable, works of art.

Consider the following to help achieve this goal.

- What is the message you are trying to convey?
- Is there a sound composition with a focal point?
- Is there a place to rest your eye?
- Are your values correct? Is there a balance of values?
- Is there a balance of light and mid-tones?
- Are the darks, dark enough?
- Are literal perspective and atmospheric perspective correct?
- Is it drawn accurately?
- Is it overworked? Using a small brush with many strokes when one stroke with a larger brush will do.
- Are the colors clean, harmonious, and varied or muddy and chalky?
- Do you have a variety of line; hard and soft, lost and found?
- Is there a variety of interesting shapes?
- Are there warm and cool areas?
- Are the shadows warm and luminous with reflected light?

Training your eye to see.

- Take a break, turn your art to the wall and work on something else, when you come back to it, days later, what jumps out at you?
- Look at the image reflected in a mirror.
- Turn the image upside down or sideways.
- Place it across the room. Is the subject strong enough to grab attention? Does something odd draw your attention.

- Take a photo with your camera and change it to black and white to check the values.
- Place it in a room with different lighting.
- Place a mat around it.

If you don't know where to begin-

- Find a mentor who is willing to help you improve your painting style through honest evaluation.
- Paint with other artists you respect and ask for their input.
- Become familiar with the elements and principles of design.
- View other paintings at local art shows, museums, and galleries. What makes a particular painting "speak to you?" What techniques can you bring to your work?
- Learn to use your tools effectively.
- Experiment, try something different, it may be the answer to your dilemma.

After reading repeated articles on evaluating your work two major items continue to repeat themselves, the importance of value and shape. Master these and you will be well on your way to better paintings.

I have learned that what I have not drawn, I have never really seen, and that when I start drawing an ordinary thing, I realize how extraordinary it is, sheer miracle.
